Sporting young people took part in a football tournament in front of leading scouts as part of the annual Hackney Marshes Football Symposium

FOOTBALL-LOVING young people, aged 16 to 19, put on their strips and set out to impress international soccer scouts at the annual

Hackney Marshes Football Symposium this month.

The annual event, from 8 to 12 April, highlighted the breadth of opportunities available for young people in the sports industry. Attendees were treated to presentations from the likes of Adidas, modelling agency Sports on Screen, and online game Football Manager. The main event was the showcase tournament, where budding footballers took part in a series of games under the watchful eyes of top scouts from Europe and North America. For more, see pages 8-9

TIME TO BE HEARD

YOUNG people from Hackney are being invited to a launch event to meet the newly appointed chairs of the Hackney Young Futures Commission and share their experiences of life in the borough.

The independent, youth-led commission is set to run over the next two years to find out how residents, aged 10 to 25 years old, view Hackney as a place to live, the changes they would like to see, and how they want to be involved in the decisions that affect them.

Alongside panel talks and networking, young people will take part in discussion groups to explore the main issues affecting their lives and the solutions they have to make Hackney a better place to grow up for all young people in the borough.

Attendees to the event will get to meet the newly-appointed commission chairs Jermain Jackman and Shekeila Scarlett, and vice-chairs, Georgina Appeagyei and Mishaque Jarrett.

The chairs all grew up in the borough and are focusing on different aspects of what it's like to be a young person living in Hackney today.

Jermain, winner of TV talent show 'The Voice' in 2014, said: "I feel it is really important that young people – as Hackney's future – should be involved in the decisions that affect our lives.

"Through this event, and others we will be organising over the next couple of months, we are bringing together children and young people with councillors, heads of services, and workers in youth clubs to make sure adults are listening to us and deciding things together to make sure positive changes are made in Hackney for those who live here."

Shekeila added: "We have already had some great conversations with other children and young people through our work as commission chairs. At this event we hope to come up with some solutions to the issues affecting our lives here in Hackney.

"I would really encourage young people to come along, be heard and get involved to make changes to Hackney that will benefit not only themselves, but their brothers, sisters, friends and the wider community."

The launch event takes place on 1 May, at Forest Road Youth Hub, from 4pm to 8pm. Attendees will receive free food and refreshments.

The Future Shoreditch Area Plan will shape new development in the area over the next 15 years

Shaping Shoreditch

PROPOSALS to support communities and businesses in Shoreditch have been set out by the Council.

The Future Shoreditch Area Plan will shape new development in the area over the next 15 years.

Shoreditch is part of London's central business district, which also includes the Square Mile and the West End.

The area has grown rapidly over the past 30 years and it has successfully established itself as the UK's Tech City, becoming an international centre for technology, culture and creativity.

It is also an attractive place to live and set up a business, and while this has created great opportunities for many people, it has also led to increased competition for space, which is driving up the cost of rents.

Last year the Council asked residents and businesses what they thought was good or bad about living and working in Shoreditch. The feedback showed increasing demand for more workspace, unaffordable rents and a lack of public spaces were of concern.

“To ensure Shoreditch remains successful and unique, investment and growth must be curated sensitively”

Of the things that were valued, one was the unique character and heritage of the area, and the other was the diverse nightlife.

The Future Shoreditch Area Plan sets out to:

- Deliver growth that benefits all
- Tackle affordability
- Support a diverse economy
- Protect Shoreditch's unique urban character
- Enhance the quality of life in the vicinity

The plan sets out a range of measures aimed at addressing these concerns and values.

From supporting a growing economy to increasing the delivery of more affordable workspace and housing in the area; to protecting its built heritage and supporting Shoreditch's London Plan designation as a 'specialist area for arts, culture and entertainment'.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Planning, Business, Investment and Culture, said: "Shoreditch has grown to become the UK's Tech City. Its unique community and its heritage are why so many people want to live, work and base their businesses here. But Shoreditch is also home to many communities and to ensure Shoreditch remains successful and unique, investment and growth must be curated sensitively.

"This plan sets out to do just that. It protects the things that matter most, such as Shoreditch's character, while continuing to attract new talent and sustain the local economy.

"Please do find a moment to have a look at the plan and let the Council know if you think it's a plan that can embrace the new, enhance the best of today and shape a great future Shoreditch."

Once adopted, the plan will provide a planning policy framework to manage new development in the area over the next 15 years.

Bus routes in Hackney are set to change, but the majority of London Overground stations will remain open

'Mixed bag' for transport

STAFFED ticket offices will remain at the majority of Hackney's Overground stations, although bus routes are set to change.

The Mayor of London has stepped in with an additional £5million for the Overground system, saving all but four of the 51 London Overground ticket offices that were threatened with closure late last year.

The busiest of London's ticket offices will continue to operate as they do now. At quieter stations, ticket offices will remain open from 7.30am till 10pm, Monday to Friday, while £1million will be spent on new technology including remote-controlled ticket barriers and trials of video-link ticket machines.

Stamford Hill and Theobalds Grove will not re-open their ticket offices.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor and Cabinet Member for Transport, said: “We are delighted at the Mayor of London's decision to fund the retention of ticket offices in Hackney.

“It's a victory for all travellers in and out of the borough, but overwhelmingly so for our vulnerable and disabled passengers who value the face-to-face support, assistance and comfort provided by transport staff.”

Transport for London (TfL) has also announced a series of intended changes to buses in Hackney, including the withdrawal of the 48 bus route and a reduction in the frequency of the 242.

Cllr Demirci said: “The announcement is a mixed bag. We're pleased that TfL has taken local people's views on board and sought to lessen the impact of some of their initial proposals, but we're disappointed that the frequency of the 242 bus will still be reduced and the 48 will still be cut entirely.”

She continued: “The reduced 242 service will further harm transport links for residents in King's Park, one of the borough's most poorly connected neighbourhoods, and the loss of the 48 also leaves the 55 as the only direct link between Lea Bridge Road and Shoreditch.”

TfL's announcement did contain some positive news for Hackney. The 388 route to London Bridge will be extended and a new bus created. The N242 will run from Homerton to the West End.

Hackney nominated in small business-friendly awards

THE Council has been shortlisted in the Small Business Friendly Borough Awards for its work supporting startups and entrepreneurs.

It has been nominated in the 'Best Programme of Support for Small Businesses' category for its Hackney Business

Network – a support package for small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs), which includes business forums; an online business portal which provides access to local business news, events, workspace, and commercial property; and free professional business advice.

Over 99 per cent of the borough's businesses are classed as SMEs.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Business, Planning and Investment, said: “The Hackney Business Network was set up to provide support and opportunities for local enterprises, and we're planning to develop it further, so it's great to see it shortlisted for this award.”

The awards are organised by the London Region of The Federation of Small Businesses and London Councils.

THE first new Council homes for a 'living rent' are set to be available in Homerton later this year to support private tenants struggling with rising rents.

Under plans to be considered by the Council's Cabinet on 29 April, eight homes at the Council's Bridge House development on Homerton High Street would be let at a genuinely affordable living rent, rather than being sold on the open market.

Rents would be set at a third of average local incomes – around £900 per month for a two-bedroom property in Homerton. With the equivalent average market rent around £1,800 per month, tenants could save nearly £11,000 a year by renting from the Council.

The Council would let and manage the homes itself through a wholly-owned, not-for-profit company as part of its #BetterRenting campaign – meaning that as well as a discounted rent, tenants can be sure they won't face unwarranted fees or excessive rent increases.

Building homes for living rent is one of a range of measures the Council is taking to improve standards and affordability for private renters in Hackney. Successes so far include the abolition of 'section 21' no-fault evictions, pressuring the Government into banning letting fees and introducing Hackney's own voluntary ban, as well as extending property licensing to tackle rogue landlords.

Philip Glanville, Mayor of Hackney, said: "I'm proud that Hackney is building genuinely affordable Council housing for families in need of somewhere to live, but I'm determined that we will also support private renters trapped in a cycle of rocketing rents and poor conditions.

"These new homes will do just that – providing a more affordable option to rent a modern, high-quality home while saving

Fairer deal for private renters

“These new homes will do just that – providing a more affordable option to rent a modern, high-quality home”

money towards a deposit or household bills.

"Hackney's 34,000 renters deserve a fairer deal, and whether it's building our own genuinely affordable homes, enforcing against rogue landlords, or pushing the Government to take radical action, we're committed to doing everything we can to make renting better."

The discounted living rent charged on homes at Bridge House will be subsidised by acquiring and letting 25 homes, built by its partner Anthology, as part of the regeneration of the Colville Estate in Hoxton. These homes will also be let through the Council's wholly-owned company, ensuring tenants are not charged letting or other fees, and have longer tenancies with capped rent increases.

The Council is building nearly 2,000 homes itself between 2018 and 2022, with the majority for social rent and shared ownership. Any homes for living rent will be those that would otherwise have been sold outright, meaning no reduction in the number of Council homes for social rent being delivered.

News in brief

Government set to end Section 21 evictions for private renters

THE Government has announced plans to end unfair 'Section 21' evictions for private renters.

On 15 April, the Government outlined plans to consult on new legislation that would mean private landlords would no longer be able to evict tenants from their homes at short notice and without good reason. This is known as Section 21 evictions.

Pushing for a change in law to prevent Section 21 evictions has been a key part of the Council's #BetterRenting campaign, with the Council joining Generation Rent's 'End Unfair Evictions' initiative.

Cllr Sem Moema, Mayoral Adviser for Private Renting and Housing Affordability, said: "I'm delighted to see the Prime Minister acknowledging the issues raised in our #BetterRenting campaign and abolishing these unfair evictions, which push families into homelessness.

"While the announcement is welcome, the Government must now deliver on this commitment without delay, setting out a clear timetable for legislation that does not allow landlords to wriggle out of their responsibilities with legal loopholes."

Research by Generation Rent has shown that Section 21 evictions are the leading cause of homelessness in England. With over 30,000 households in Hackney renting privately, nearly one in three Hackney residents are vulnerable to eviction with little notice and through no fault of their own.

Call to regulate Airbnb lets

A CALL on Government to introduce tougher measures to regulate Airbnb-style lets in the capital has been made.

Last week, Hackney joined the Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, and other London boroughs in asking Government to introduce a registration system for short-term let properties.

With nearly 6,000 homes in the borough advertised on Airbnb alone, Hackney has some of the highest levels of short-term lets in London. While homeowners can only let out homes on Airbnb, or similar platforms, for 90 days each year, a lack of registration makes this difficult for councils to enforce, leading to concerns that much-needed permanent housing for local people is being lost.

Cllr Sem Moema, Mayoral Adviser for Private Renting and Housing Affordability, said: "It's vital that we stop abuse of the short-term lettings industry and prevent homes that should provide long-term housing for local people from being permanently lost to short-term rentals for visitors." IT STANDS on the corner of Calvert Avenue and Shoreditch High Street. It is a small, old-fashioned food and drink kiosk serving no-frills honest fare to regulars and passers-by alike. And, apart from one day, it has been a fixture on that corner for a century.

Last month, the Tothill family, owners of 'Syd's Coffee Stall', celebrated 100 years of trading in the borough. In that very same spot.

It is a remarkable tale and it began as the nation started to pick itself up following the end of the First World War.

In 1919, Sydney Edward Tothill returned home from the front and used his pension to pay for the construction of a wooden coffee stall. Trade was brisk and Syd's Coffee Stall soon attracted a regular clientele. In 1922, it became the first coffee stall to have mains electricity when it was connected to an adjoining lamp post.

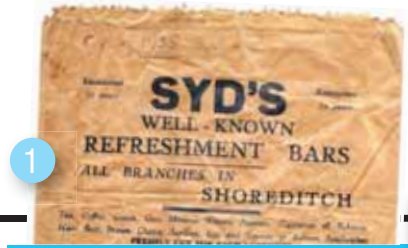

It was even featured in the 1932 film 'Ebb Tide' – shot at Elstree studios – and the only time the cart left Shoreditch.

Another world war loomed but Syd's Coffee Stall was given special dispensation to stay put and open, serving ambulance and fire services as the Blitz raged across London.

Despite the dangers, Syd, along with his wife May, carried on serving – only taking cover in the surrounding buildings when the air raid sirens sounded their warning.

Having seen off the worst of the Blitz, when the Second World War ended, Syd handed over the family business to his son, also called Sydney.

In the 1960s, Calvert Avenue was resurfaced but the stall could not be moved. Instead, the decision was made to continue the renovations around it. While the rest of the street has been modernised, the stall still stands with its wooden wheels resting on a great business. "Some of them are still here to see this milestone and sadly some are not, but they are with us in spirit. It's been a marvellous effort from everybody and I'm just so thankful."

Cllr Ian Rathbone, who made the presentation, said: "One hundred years is quite a remarkable achievement. We are so thankful to Jane and her family for being so faithful to Hackney."

"It is an incredible story and a huge inspiration to our residents who are thinking about running a stall. It shows that even in this difficult economic climate you can run a stall, earn a living from it and enjoy being part of an amazing community."

After 100 years and three generations, Syd's Coffee Stall is still standing and still serving its customers. Even Prince Edward stopped by for a cup of tea there. And why not? The capital has seen an influx of coffee stalls, independent coffee shops and modern franchise eateries since Syd's Coffee Stall began trading all those years ago.

And it's still there, still using that same lamp post for its power supply today as it did in 1922. The oldest coffee stall in London.

Jane Tothill, Syd's granddaughter, began working at the stall in 1987 along with her brothers. She eventually took over running the stall and remains the manager to this day.

On 22 March, to mark the centenary of the stall, the Council presented her with an honorary plaque and flowers.

She said: "I just want to say thank you to my family who have worked so hard to make this such

THE chance to get a paid internship with Adidas, a coding apprenticeship with online game Football Manager, or a scholarship to a university in America: these were just some of the opportunities available to young people at the Hackney Marshes Football Symposium.

Held between 8 and 12 April at the Marshes – the home of grassroots football – and attended by 300 young women and men, the event highlighted the breadth of opportunities in the sports industry.

Attendees got a chance to network, took part in a casting session, were given the opportunity to take part in peer-to-peer mental health support training with the Professional Football

Modelling agency Sports on Screen was also at the event, picking out future talent to appear in sports advertising, such as its most recent campaign for Nike – ‘Nothing Beats a Londoner’.

This is the third year that the Hackney Marshes Football Symposium has been run

DID YOU KNOW?

Young people attended the Hackney Marshes Football Symposium and took part in a series of football matches for 10 years as a coach at Tottenham Hotspur.

"You will come to an interview and everyone will have qualifications, but coming with both volunteering and qualifications will set you above everyone else, it will show your commitment and passion for football and give you an edge."

After the sessions, the young people took part in a series of showcase football games, which included seven female and 12 male teams aged between 16 and 19 years old.

The young people got the chance to impress sports scouts from across Europe and North America.

Kobi Coker, 20, from Stoke Newington, was scouted at last year's event and is now studying, with a scholarship, at Broward College in Florida.

He said: "The symposium is a great way for any player interested in getting connected and clued up with the world of football.

"What I like is that the focus of attention doesn't have to be on your performance level. It's just a case of if you have a desire and a love of football then there are a number of opportunities that you can access on and off the pitch to succeed in football – as I am doing."

Cllr Carole Williams, Cabinet Member for Employment, Skills and Human Resources, said: "I am proud that as a Council we are able to host the Hackney Marshes Football Symposium and Showcase, where we can facilitate some of the best opportunities for our young people, bringing them together with top industry professionals to help them achieve their career goals."

THE thing that moves and frustrates me more than any other is the role that luck plays in defining people's chances in life," says Josh Babarinde. The founder of Dalston-based Cracked It has such an immaculate CV, it's hard to imagine he has ever had personal experience of this.

He graduated from one of the UK's leading universities, went straight to work in Westminster, launched one of the UK's leading social enterprises and won loads of awards.

Yet, he points out: "There were periods of my childhood that were really difficult. I don't want to dwell on those experiences, but they really affected me and they continue to drive what I do."

On a happier note, he discovered this drive at a young age. When he was just 13 he got his first job. He says: "I tutored the son of a family friend, helping him with his maths. Word spread among the mums at the school gate, and soon I had a little class of three."

"I loved it. I loved that sense of empowering them, it really stuck with me."

Politics seemed an obvious channel through which to change people's lives for the better. So after moving to London to study politics at the London School of Economics, and while at university, Josh worked as a parliamentary assistant for a Lib Dem MP.

It was 2011, one year into the Cameron/Clegg coalition Government. "That didn't go well for us at the ballot box," laughs Josh, but for a while he flourished.

He adds: "I was contributing to speeches, seeing them play out in the Houses of Parliament..."

It was really exciting but I started to grow frustrated.

"I felt very removed from what was happening in the world outside."

So in 2014 he took the bold decision to leave politics and enrol in Year Here, the London Fields-based programme for professionals who want to make a real difference and find solutions to society's toughest problems.

“The tech sector is where the growth is... It's all around us, yet many of these young people had no way of accessing it”

It was a very different life to the one he lived inside the Westminster bubble. He found himself in Tower Hamlets, mentoring young people at risk of offending, coaching them towards employment instead.

He says: "Things became clear to me that wouldn't have had I stayed in Westminster. Young people were telling me that they were stealing bikes just to secretly slip money into their mum's handbag. They desperately wanted to make money in a better way."

"It's stressful to be constantly looking over one shoulder for the sound of each passing police siren, and the other for signs of rival gangs."

Josh continues: "Some of them had done horrible things and they've got to own that."

"But it became clear that it was less of a choice as far as they were concerned."

Statistics indicate that reoffending rates drop dramatically when those involved are employed. But, Josh points out, it is harder than ever for school leavers to find decent jobs.

He says: "The ones traditionally available, in manufacturing and agriculture for example, are drying up."

"The tech sector's where the growth is happening and here we are in the East End, sandwiched between Canary Wharf, Silicon Roundabout, and Here East in the Olympic Park. The tech sector is all around us, yet many of these young people had no way of accessing it."

Josh hit upon a plan. He watched a lot of YouTube videos, found a local business to support him, took four young people and taught them to fix cracked iPhone screens.

As 29 per cent of people have a cracked smartphone, it seemed a good idea. But, Josh says: "None of us could have anticipated how well it went. They were so proficient, so engaged. I realised we couldn't just leave it there."

Five years later, around 170 young people have passed through Cracked It's training schemes. Referred by youth offending schemes, employability schemes and local authorities, they learn not only how to fix a phone and (at around £50 per repair) make a decent profit from doing so, but also the soft skills that employers want, like communication and collaboration, which they can take into all sorts of sectors and jobs.

Last year, Cracked It was named social enterprise of the year, in part because its model works as well for customers as it does for the young people it helps.

Seventy-six per cent of phone owners don't get cracked phones fixed within six months because they are so busy. Cracked It sets up pop-up repair clinics inside the offices of companies employing over 1,000 people. The young technicians will fix phones during the lunch break, without the owners even having to leave the building.

"We have around 15 to 20 work-place partners at the moment. By 2020, I want that to be 40," Josh says. Nor is he content to stop at phone repairs.

He continues: "I want to scope out other services we can tap into, using a similar model."

So he won't be heading back to Westminster, then? There's a pause. "Certainly not in a back office role," he says. Watch this space...

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q: I want to go plastic free, but I am a big makeup fan. I realised that most of my makeup comes in plastic containers, which are not recyclable. I searched online but could only find plastic-free makeup from the United States. Please Green Genie, make my wish come true and find me some plastic-free makeup I can buy here, in London.

A: While plastic-free make up is still in its infancy there are a few brands that are starting to emerge. The great thing about buying brands that are more conscious of their packaging is that they tend to care more about what's in the product too.

A good place to start is Lush; it has a good range of 'naked' makeup in a wide variety of shades, which are sold in refillable packaging or recycled packaging. The packaging can then be returned to the store for reuse. If you like your makeup A-list approved, try RMS Beauty, Green People, PHB Ethical Beauty or Ere Perez. Don't forget about makeup removers too. Avoid plastic woven face wipes by using coconut oil with reusable cotton pads. The pads can be put in the washing machine and be reused.

If you have beauty product packaging to recycle, try Bulk Market. For more information on Terracycle bins, visit: www.terracycle.com/en-GB/

A breath of fresh air

THE Council has been awarded nearly £200,000 to help more residents and businesses improve air quality.

The funding follows a successful bid to the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs' Air Quality Grant scheme.

It will allow the Council to expand its Shoreditch-focused Zero Emissions Network (ZEN) to new parts of the borough, where it will help businesses and residents switch to less polluting modes of transport, such as cargo bikes or electric vehicles.

“I'm really excited that we can now expand ZEN to other parts of the borough”

The funding will also allow the ZEN to support delivery riders to switch from mopeds to e-bikes and raise awareness of polluting wood burning stoves, which in winter are thought to account for about 10 per cent of London's particulate emissions.

ZEN has been funded by the Mayor of London since 2014. Since it was established, it has recruited over 1,300 Hackney businesses and 700 residents to help them reduce their emissions.

It has supported businesses to replace 31 polluting vehicles with electric ones or cargo bikes, and has supported businesses and residents to replace 117 private vehicles with car club membership.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: “We are a leader in tackling London's poor air quality and are committed to protecting residents from its harmful effects.

“I'm really excited that we can now expand the ZEN to other parts of the borough.”

Further consultation on Walford Road proposals

THE Council's Cabinet is expected to recommend that further consultation is carried out on proposals to improve roads in the Walford Road area for cyclists and pedestrians.

It follows the release of detailed air quality modelling of the proposals last month, and subsequent requests from schools and some residents to have the opportunity to comment on the proposals in light of this information.

Subject to Cabinet approval, further consultation on the Walford Road proposals is expected to start in May.

While the consultation takes place, the Council is increasing the number of parking enforcement officers in the Walford Road area to tackle some of the traffic pressures and antisocial behaviour related to rat-running in the area.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor of Hackney, said: “I'm recommending that further consultation is carried out on the scheme, which, in light of all the up-to-date information and subject to that further consultation, is currently considered to be the better of the two options previously put forward for the area.”

For more info visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/walford-road-area

THE proposals include permanently closing Nevill Road between Osterley Road and Walford Road; Clonbrock Road at its junction with Nevill Road; and Allen Road at its junction with Nevill Road.

PREVIEW

Right Now Film Festival

6-12 May, Rio Cinema, 107 Kingsland High Street, Dalston, E8 2PB

WANT to explore what's really going on right now, around the world? You could do worse than starting right here, in your neighbourhood cinema.

The Right Now Film Festival might be a small indie festival, but it has big ambitions. It was set up to interrogate the global issues from which mainstream cinema might shy away, bringing five edgy documentary films to independent cinemas.

► For more info, visit: www.rightnowfilmfestival.org

From 6 to 12 May, at Dalston's Rio Cinema, you can watch feature-length docs about whistleblower cops in New York, the growing movement of Flat-Earthers, Syrian refugees who have eight months to 'learn to be American' and an Irish farmer's battle against a multinational giant.

Its organisers promise that all five films 'take a deeper look at power structures and inequalities in the world today.' So get booking, right now, at: riocinema.org.uk

PREVIEW*What is This?*3 May, Earth, 11-17 Stoke Newington Road, N16 8BH

SIMON Amstell is busy. His feature film, 'Benjamin', is attracting rave reviews, leaving him with time to do only two stand up shows in the whole of 2019. Thoughtfully, however, he's arranged for both to be happening on your doorstep. The comedian, TV presenter, writer and film maker will be on stage at Earth Hackney to perform a special show that will be filmed for release later in the year. Actually, he'll perform two – one at 6.30pm, and another at 9pm. In each, and over the course of an hour, Simon will combine the most personal elements of his critically acclaimed shows, 'To Be Free' and 'What is This?'

Expect the usual, painfully funny clash of acerbic wit and angst as Amstell explores his own encounters with beauty, intimacy, freedom, sex and love.

Simon Amstell performs 'What is This?', at Earth Hackney on 3 May, at 6.30pm and 9.00pm. The show is suitable for those over the age of 16 and tickets cost £18.70.

Merrie May Day

4 May, Geffrye Museum, 136 Kingsland Road, E2 BEA

SPRING has sprung and to celebrate the Geffrye Museum is putting on a party. Although the main museum is still closed, while its £18million redevelopment is underway, its magical gardens will be filled with maypole dancing and music for a free Merrie May Day celebration.

There will be activities catering to all ages – don't miss the Geffrye Explorer's Garden Cart for kids – plus stalls selling everything from upcycled bug hotels to spring plants and vintage fabrics.

And when all that maypole leaping and ribbon waving wears you out, recharge with some grub from the Sunrise Curry Club, homemade cakes from Feast London or a locally brewed craft beer. Here comes the sun...

Merrie May Day takes place from 11am to 4pm, 4 May. Entrance is free.

For more information, visit: www.geffrye-museum.org.uk

SCHOOLS in the borough are set to get a £16million boost to improve and preserve their Victorian and Edwardian buildings.

The investment will help to maintain the borough's older school buildings, providing funds primarily for roof and facade repairs, as well as heating and lighting upgrades.

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor, said: "These Victorian and Edwardian schools are really important to our residents.

"They're a much-loved part of our heritage and have welcomed generations of local pupils through their doors.

"They're beautiful buildings but require a vast amount of maintenance. With ongoing Government cuts continuing to affect local authorities, this is a real challenge without investment from the Department for Education."

One of the schools set to benefit is Benthall Primary School, N16. Work started this month to redecorate the school, refurbish the toilets, upgrade the heating system and, with input from the school, improve the playgrounds. The work is expected to cost around £500,000.

Louise Drew, headteacher at Benthall Primary School, said:

Investing in schools

“Victorian and Edwardian schools are a much-loved part of our local heritage and have welcomed generations of pupils”

"We're really pleased to be working with the Council to improve our school building. We're also creating a brand new ICT suite, and pupils and staff are excited about the improvements on the way."

Haggerston School, E2, has already benefited from the funding, with £1million spent on upgrading its science laboratories to provide a high class learning environment for today's curriculum, and the flexibility to continue doing so into the future.

Over 30 schools will benefit from this investment, following assessments conducted by the Council.

Parents and carers will be updated about any works taking place at their school, and any disruptive work will take place in the holidays.

Word up! Project improves boys' literacy skills

A PROJECT run at Skinners' Academy, N4, has helped male pupils to improve their reading and writing, and close the literacy gender gap.

Devised for boys in Years 8 and 9 by 1st Verse Education, the 'Our Literate Boys' project was developed in response to low achievement levels and high exclusion rates for boys, particularly those from a black, Asian and minority ethnic (BAME) background.

It encourages male pupils to explore words and language in film, short stories, music and spoken word, before developing and presenting their own pieces of work.

Skinners' Academy students Christivie Bwana, Jaquan Byrue and Daniel Taiwo, all 13, and Ridwan Abdilla and Ahmed Guthmy, 14, took part in the project.

They presented their work in a 'Power of Words' exhibition at media agency MediaCom in Central London earlier this month.

Ahmed said: "Taking part in this project has made me realise there's more to me and my identity and there's another side of myself that I can express."

1st Verse Education plan to roll the course out to other schools in Hackney.

News in brief

Updated children's centres subsidies set to be introduced

PLANS to ensure affordable childcare is available for lower and middle income families across the borough are expected to be approved by the Council.

Hackney's children's centres, such as The Ann Tayler Children's Centre, pictured, provide around 650 full-time equivalent, subsidised nursery places for children up to five years old.

Fees are means tested, based on household income, and are currently based on three bands, which have been in place for 10 years. The bands have been reviewed and updated to address funding pressures as a result of Government funding cuts.

Subject to approval by Cabinet, five new fee bands will be introduced in September to allow a greater range of subsidies according to families' income.

The new banding system sees the new first band reflect the average London salary of £34,000, which attracts a subsidy of up to 63.5 per cent of the total cost of a nursery place. The other bands group household incomes up to £100,000 and over.

Families will be able to continue to use their free 15 or 30 hours entitlement as usual.

Cllr Chris Kennedy, Cabinet Member for Families, Early Years and Play, said: "The changes we are introducing will allow us to maintain subsidies for those on lower incomes, despite funding pressures due to Government cuts. To enable this we will be reducing subsidies for higher earners."

New advisory schools group board will launch in autumn

A NEW advisory board is expected to be approved by the Council's Cabinet to further improve education in Hackney's schools.

Proposals for the Hackney Schools Group Board follows discussions with schools, governors, parents and the general public about what they think the board should focus on and how it should operate.

The board will involve headteachers in shaping local policies and enable schools to work more closely together to share expertise.

It will be led by an independent chair, and board members will represent different sectors of the school system.

A series of panels will look at specific areas to feed into the Hackney Schools Group Board, including achievement, professional development and innovation, as well as wellbeing and support for vulnerable young people. Recruitment to the board will begin in May allowing the board to launch in the autumn term.

Hackney's Dementia Festival returns

Hackney's Dementia Festival is set to return for the second year, with a programme of events including a tea dance at Shoreditch Town Hall (pictured)

HACKNEY is set to host a Dementia Festival for the second year running to mark this year's Dementia Action Week.

Running from 16 to 29 May, the festival programme includes a series of events, such as a tea dance at Shoreditch Town Hall on 23 May, a Caribbean Tea Party at Hackney Caribbean Elders Organisation on 20 May, and Alzheimer's Society's Big Singing for the Brain event at the Copper Box Arena in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park on 16 May.

There are around 1,300 people living with dementia in Hackney, and the festival aims to celebrate them.

Other activities include a

“I'm extremely pleased to see the return of Hackney's Dementia Festival”

dementia-friendly walking, cycling, and swimming 'triathlon'; a 'positive spin' cycle event; and swimming and walking.

St Joseph's Hospice will also have a day of activities including art, singing, twiddle-cuff knitting, yoga and information sessions. There will also be dementia-friendly screenings of classic and modern films such as 'Mamma Mia – Here We Go Again' and 'Love Me Or Leave Me.'

Harry Johnson, Dementia Friendly Community

Coordinator in Hackney, said: "I'm extremely pleased to see the return of Hackney's Dementia Festival, a programme designed specifically for people with dementia.

"Like last year, we have a great line-up of events, most of them free, to raise awareness and understanding of the condition and most importantly for people with dementia and their loved ones to have fun and be included and involved in their community."

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Deputy Mayor and Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care, Transport and Parks, added: "It is important that we keep raising awareness in all groups to ensure more people access services that are available to them."

The festival is organised by members of Dementia Friendly Hackney, Alzheimer's Society, the Council, Homerton Hospital and local businesses, arts, leisure and community organisations.

News in brief

Join the digital focus group

RESIDENTS who use their smartphones or tablets to interact with a GP, or book appointments online, are being invited to share their experiences with the Council. From 13 May the national NHS app is set to be live in Hackney. Residents will be able to easily interact with their GP practices on their smartphones, although most borough GPs already offer ways of interacting with them digitally. The Council would like to hear residents' experiences and is holding two focus groups on 8 May and 13 May, from 6.30pm to 8.30pm. As a thank you for taking part, participants will be given a £20 Love2Shop voucher. To register for a focus group, join Hackney Matters at: www.hackneymatters.org.uk/join\_now and select 'Digital First Focus Group' in the activity list, or email: consultation@hackney.gov.uk and state which date(s) you can attend, your name, telephone and email.

Rare cancer seminar success

A SEMINAR to raise awareness and support training for rare and uncommon cancers took place for GPs in Hackney last month.

The seminar, at the West Reservoir Centre in Green Lanes, was organised by the Council and City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group following the Council's motion last October to raise awareness of rare and uncommon cancers.

The motion was thought to be the first of its kind in the country and set out to work with local partners to improve cancer diagnosis and support for patients. The seminar focused on resources for GPs, diagnosis, treatment pathways and the advances in treating some rare and uncommon cancers.

Primary Care GP services provided to homeless people in Hackney

A NEW healthcare programme aims to get Hackney's homeless into permanent housing and in better health.

East London NHS Foundation Trust (ELFT) has begun working with Groundswell, a charity which works with homeless and vulnerable people. Together, they have launched a GP practice at The Greenhouse, a walk-in centre on Tudor Road that supports rough sleepers, those in hostels and the hidden homeless.

Steven Platts, chief executive at Groundswell, said: "This is a fantastic opportunity for us to partner with ELFT and homelessness services to enable people to access health services in Hackney and improve their health and well-being. Achieving good health outcomes for rough sleepers and vulnerably housed people is a vital step towards independence."

The practice provides all usual medical care services including vaccinations and some maternity services. One of its key aims is to prevent people losing their home due to the symptoms of mental illness.

It will work closely with Council housing officers and social care workers to develop care plans. It also has consultation rooms in which partner organisations can provide advice on issues from housing to debts and education.

Dr Kate Corlett,

associate medical director at ELFT, said: "We are delighted to have won this contact to be involved with supporting homeless people in the borough in practical ways to help them get permanent housing and in better health."

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food For Life Programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge. This salad makes use of fresh, seasonal ingredients that you will find in the shops in May and June. Eating seasonally (buying foods that have been grown in the UK) can be cheaper, as you are not paying for the additional transport and storage costs of imported foods. Seasonal, local food usually has more flavour because it is fresher. This also means you get to absorb more of the vitamins and minerals which can be lost during transport and storage. You could swap some of the ingredients in this salad for asparagus, new potatoes, watercress or lettuce, which are also in season in the UK.

Courgette and broad bean salad

Makes: 2 servings, as a main dish

Preparation time 15 mins

Cooking time 10-15 mins

Ingredients

- 2 courgettes
- 6-8 radishes
- A handful of fresh or frozen broad beans
- 4-6 spring onions
- Small bunch of mint
- 100g feta, mozzarella or other soft cheese
- 1 lemon
- 1 tsp black pepper
- 2 tbsps olive oil water to the boil and add the broad beans. Cook for approximately 2 minutes and then drain. Place the beans into a bowl of cold water and set aside

- Meanwhile, slice the courgettes into rounds. Add 1 tablespoon of olive oil to a sauté or frying pan and set at a medium heat. Add the courgette slices (you may need to do this in batches depending on the size of your pan) and cook until softening and starting to brown (approx 5-7 minutes). When all the courgettes are cooked, set aside
- Slice the spring onions and the radishes and add to a large bowl with the courgettes
- Drain the broad beans and pop the tender, bright green beans out of their thick, leathery skins by squeezing gently. Discard the skins and add the beans to the salad
- Tear some of the mint leaves and add to the salad. Crumble the cheese and dress with 1 tablespoon olive oil, some black pepper and lemon juice
- Serving suggestion: The salad can be served with a whole grain like brown rice or brown bulgar wheat and pumpkin seeds for a vegetarian meal, or with grilled fish or meat. Vegans can remove the cheese and add nuts or seeds

Method

- Remove the broad beans from their pods. If you are using frozen beans you can skip this step
- Bring a small saucepan of

Last chance to have your say on the 'Dalston Conversation'

OVER 4,000 residents have joined in the 'Dalston Conversation' so far to tell the Council their views about the future of their community.

Dalston's population has risen by 12 per cent in just four years, and the prospect of Crossrail 2 – a proposed high-speed train line that would link the town centre directly to north, central and south-west London – means developers and landowners are likely to want to build more tall buildings in the area.

While some of these changes will be out of the Council's control, it wants to make sure it is using every tool at its disposal to maximise the benefits of growth for residents and achieve the objectives of Dalston's communities.

Residents, businesses and visitors have until 6 May to share what they want to see improved and how they feel about the changes that are already happening.

Consultation on proposals for Fairchild's Garden renovation

FAIRCHILD'S Garden – previously known as Hackney Road Recreation Ground – could be in line for a revamp under proposals being consulted on by the Council.

Built on the former burial ground of St Leonard's Church, the site contains a memorial to Thomas Fairchild, a notable 17th century horticulturalist, after whom the park was named in 2017.

Proposals for Fairchild's Garden include a new wider entrance

The proposals would see a new, wider entrance set back from Hackney Road, an on-site kiosk selling drinks and snacks, new planting inspired by Fairchild, level access into and around the park, and more places to sit.

The Council is asking residents to have their say on the plans. The consultation ends on 24 May.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Clare Potter.
